HERE ARE but few words needed in presenting to the School this annual review of events and happenings at Phillips Academy. The book is its own best speaker, bearing as it does the record of a year so eventful as has been that of 1898-'99.

To all who have coöperated with the editors in the publication of this book there is returned appreciation and hearty thanks.

The Editors are especially grateful to Messrs. Pettee, Eaton, Freeman and F. E. Newton of the Faculty, for interest and assistance.

Prizes have been awarded for particular features, as in past years. For "grinds" there were two prizes awarded, to James Henry Alger and Arthur Joseph Alexander Charwate, while for drawings, honorable mention is given to George Arthur Childs and Walter Ames Mathews.

history of Class of Ninety-Nine.

N FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1895, the class of '99 began its career at the "Old School on Andover Hill." If Mercury, the bestower of prosperity, has slighted the class in any way, surely beginning on Friday, 13th, was the cause.

At the beginning the class was composed of fifty-eight members — twenty scientific and thirty-eight classical. Of this number only eleven — three scientific and eight classical — are still with us. A few managed to graduate with '98, a few have been forced to swell the ranks of 1900, and the rest have left us for reasons better known to themselves and the Faculty.

The '99 Preps were, with very few exceptions, innocent and timid creatures, possessing sufficient verdure to satisfy the most sardonic upperclassman. A good many unusual things took place that year. The class of ninety-six was the largest in the history of the Academy. It contained one hundred and fifty-eight members, and was fairly bubbling over with school and class spirit. The school lost both the football and baseball games to Lawrenceville, and the track meet to Worcester, so we had no opportunity to celebrate an athletic victory. The town of Andover, however, celebrated with great pomp and splendor the 250th anniversary of its peaceful existence, and the Academy joined in the noted night-shirt parade. Since then several colleges have had "night shirt" or "shirt-tail" parades, which custom seems to have started that year at Andover.

The '99 Preps were silent witnesses at the several over-crowded mass meetings, where the Coöp. question was discussed, or rather condemned because the Faculty had suggested it. The class also witnessed several nocturnal celebrations at which the main sentiment was à bas la Coöp. and all its supporters. At several of these clandestine meetings red paint was used in an anarchial style much to the discomfort of Mr. N——, then chief of the P. A. Fire Department, "Pink Whiskers" and one or two other citizens of the town.

When the school opened in the fall of '96, the whole country was engrossed in the coming presidential election and naturally the Academy also became interested in it. A McKinley gold club was formed composing all the school, except three fellows who were apostles of the "Boy Orator of the Platte." The gold men indulged in a parade and class fight a few nights previous to the election, for all of which, no doubt, President McKinley feels very much indebted. Athletic relations were resumed with Exeter that fall and we won the football game with a score of 28 to o.

Then came the class game which '99 won from '98, the score being 11 to 6. With this victory began '99's phenomenal athletic career. The '99 track athletes captured the '97 Fall Meet and the '98 Spring Meet and the '99 baseball team defeated '00, 26 to 11. Last fall '99 again won the Meet-

In the Junior Middle year the membership of the class was increased to seventy-two, and in the Middle Year there were one hundred and fourteen fellows in the class. The Fall Term of the Middle Year was rather uneventful. Exeter won the football game and we beat Lawrenceville so easily that there was very little enthusiasm over the victory. In the spring of this year we held a mass meeting for the organization of a company to fight in the Spanish war. The idea of a P. A. Company of U. S. Volunteers began and ended at this meeting. The baseball team that spring, as many know, was the best the school ever had. We won the Lawrenceville and Exeter games, and for the first time since the resumption of athletic relations between the two schools, we had an old time celebration of a victory over Exeter.

The class of '99 began its Senior year with one hundred and sixteen members, under whose leadership the school has certainly prospered. The football season was the most successful one had in recent years. There has been during the year as wholesome and loyal a school spirit as could be desired. Largely through the efforts of '99, the school has secured a board track and sufficient money was raised for a new athletic field. The class decided to present the school with the bleachers on the new athletic field.

There are very few men in the class who will not regret leaving Andover in June, never to come back as members of the student body. There will be very few who will not always look back upon their school-days at Phillips Andover as their most profitable and pleasant days. May the members of '99 prove in after life loyal and true friends to the "Old School on Andover Hill," and may they do all in their power to keep it, as it has always been, the foremost of preparatory schools.

Frank A. Lucas.

history of Publications

N looking back forty-five years to the time when the first literary magazine was published at Phillips, we can not but feel a pardonable pride in the growth of this branch of school work. From the Philo Mirror have arisen four separate and distinct publications, each complete in itself, taking up different phases of the literary life of the school.

Although a manuscript copy was submitted to the Society at stated intervals almost from the founding of Philo in 1825, yet not until the year 1854 was the first publication of the Philo Mirror brought forth. This paper was published by the Philomathean Society and was largely a report of its work. The first few numbers contained philosophical essays but later the editors began to feel a broader sense of their duties and good editorials were more in evidence among the pages of the magazine.

The first radical change that was made was in 1867 when a department called the Phillips Pot-Pourri was added, and it was this department augmented by the ever changing and growing school life that caused the magazine later to be divided into two parts.

Following the centennial of 1878 came a general quickening of school life, and among the new activities the establishment of The Phillipian by E. S. Beach, was a distinctive feature of the period. This paper was published fortnightly and although the news it contained amounted to little, more attention was given to editorial matter than at present. How the Phillipian has prospered is evident. It has changed from a fortnightly to a semi-weekly publication and has become almost a necessary factor of school life.

In the year 1892 the Pot-Pourri in the back part of the Philo Mirror grew to such a size that it was deemed advisable for Philo to turn the publication of the Mirror over to the school and to publish an annual. Editors were then elected to publish this literary monthly to be known as The Phillips Andover Mirror. This magazine has been a success and has been showing much improvement from year to year.

In the year following, Philo published its annual, "The Masque," which, from a literary standpoint, was a success, but it failed financially, and this fact prevented its further publication.

The Pot-Pourri, named after the former department of the old Philo Mirror, was then started and with varied financial success it has continued until the present day, carrying out the same idea for which "The Masque" was originated.

Following in the foot-steps of ninety-seven, the graduating class of last year published a class book. This book was a valuable addition to the three publications which already existed, and a successful publication of the same kind is expected from the class of ninety-nine.

This brief review shows how the school publications have reached their present number and standard, after varied fortunes and experiences. They now seem to represent all the different phases of school life in a creditable manner.

AT CHURCH

A burst of airy wings outspread, Rosettes both red and blue, A bit of lace, a fluff of tulle, An artful bud or two, To watch the pinky bloom that sweeps Across her cheeks, and that, The essence of simplicity, Is the Fem. Sem's Sunday hat. When bravely down the aisle she goes In time for evening prayer, What envy pouts upon the lips, Of every rival fair! And who can wonder that the chants Are sung a trifle flat, With all the choir looking straight At the Fem. Sem's. Sunday hat. We, sitting in a pew behind, Through sermon, psalm and hymn, Are baffled by the curve and droop Of that provoking brim. We long to brush our finger-tip, In an audacious pat, Across the rippled hair half-hid By the Fem. Sem's. Sunday hat. But patience: when the organ sounds To set the crowd astir, And out in front a flock of lads Wait for a smile from her, For us she has a glance so shy Our hearts grow warm thereat, And longingly we gaze after The Fem. Sem's. Sunday hat.
